Hurst won by 138 wickets

After 3 weeks of washouts, the Hurley 2's finally got a game of cricket in, mainly due to the sterling efforts of Jeff in preparing a great pitch. After getting dumped by Gerrard's Cross 2 days before the game, R Simon was able to arrange a game against the 'weak/medium' side of Hurst. It turned out they were probably more on the medium, than the weak, side. After an early run out with the classic 'pretend fumble' by Tait the keeper, then a great slips catch by Masters off Brackstone, the Hurst batters got on top. The Hurley attack of pretty much everyone bowling the same medium/slow did not trouble Singh and Brighton who put on 130 odd without too much hassle. With the spin of Todd finally removing Singh, then Brighton going shortly after to an erratic Masters, Hurley finally brought the run rate down a bit. Mansell and newcomer Clive Walker (who hadn't bowled in '20 yrs') kept things tight, then pick of the bowlers R Simon picked up a few late wickets to go with his good spell from earlier on.

After a great tea break, the Hurley batters started positively. Dawson and Selvege looked comfortable, however just as they settling in, Selvege (11) lost his concentration, and Dawson (13) was caught and bowled in spectacular fashion after middling one straight down the pitch. Cue the traditional Hurley batting collapse. A small amount of pride was restored by Duffell (14) and Masters (30) who at least stuck in the middle for a few overs, but eventually Hurley finished on 89 all out.

Sixes – none
